Parliamentary Candidates Between Voters and Parties May 12 2022

This book offers the first comprehensive, comparative and coherent perspective on parliamentary candidates in contemporary representative democracy. Based on the unique database of the 'Comparative Candidate Survey' project which interrogated parliamentary candidates in more than 30 countries, it fills a significant lacuna by focusing on the thousands of ordinary candidates that participate in national elections. It examines who the candidates are in terms of their socio-demographic background and political career patterns, how they were selected by their parties, what their policy preference are and whether these are congruent to those held by their voters, who they seek to represent and how they intend to do so once elected, and what their visions are on representative democracy and party government. Last but not least, it investigates how they go about reaching out to their potential voters during the election campaign. This book will be of key interest to scholars and students of political parties and party politics, political elites, political communication, political participation, elections, theories of democracy and representation, legislative studies, voting behaviour and more broadly to European politics, as well as to political and policy professionals throughout Europe.

Democratizing Candidate Selection Dec 19 2022 This book studies the challenges to conventional politics posed by new ways of selecting candidates for legislative elections. The recent economic crisis had profound political consequences on politics, generating an upsurge in the demand for more participative ways of decision-making in politics channelled through social movements and individuals in different countries. Some parties have reacted by introducing changes in their internal organization (via intra-party democracy), particularly related to the selection of candidates for public office. This volume explores the trends and challenges of these new methods of selection, analyses how the internet is increasingly being used as a selection tool, and evaluates some of the relevant consequences related to political representation, party cohesion and party centralization, among others.

People Like Us Nov 06 2021 The inspiring story of political newcomers (sometimes also newcomers to America) who are knocking down built-in barriers to creating better government The system is rigged: America's political leadership remains overwhelmingly white, male, moneyed, and Christian. Even at the local and state levels, elected office is inaccessible to the people it aims to represent. But in People Like Us, political scientist Sayu Bhojwani shares the stories of a diverse and persevering range of local and state politicians from across the country who are challenging the status quo, winning against all odds, and leaving a path for others to follow in their wake. In Anaheim, California, a previously undocumented Mexican American challenges the high-powered interests of the Disney Corporation to win a city council seat. In the Midwest, a thirty-something Muslim Somali American unseats a forty-four-year incumbent in the Minnesota house of representatives. These are some of the foreign-born, lower-income, and of-color Americans who have successfully taken on leadership roles in elected office despite xenophobia, political gatekeeping, and personal financial concerns. In accessible prose, Bhojwani shines a light on the political, systemic, and cultural roadblocks that prevent government from effectively representing a rapidly changing America, and offers forward-thinking solutions on how to get rid of them. People Like Us serves as a road map for the burgeoning democracy that has been a long time in the making: inclusive, multiracial, and unstoppable.

Ready and Desirous; Or, the Right Preparation of Candidates for the Laying on of Hands Oct 17 2022 This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1885 edition. Excerpt: ...in which some of our people join without scruple. 4. But especially should we persuade our candidates to take this vow of renunciation out of the region of abstractions and generalities, and to consider what it means in the case of the individual who utters it. "Take up thy cross," is the spoken word; not a cross of cloud and mist; not some one else's cross; but thine own cross of duty and of self-denial. Great armies seldom engage all along the line. There is some one spot which is key to the position; some strategic point, at which the battle is won or lost. Each candidate knows, or may know, what is that indulgence, replete with danger, which it most pains him to surrender. Does he mean to renounce that, and to take up the cross of a struggle, life-long, it maybe, against it? Is there some custom or luxury familiar to the world, innocent in the case of many, perhaps, but fraught with danger to his peculiar temperament, or for special reasons inadmissible in his circumstances? And is he ready to include that in his renunciation? Oh, how much does the after Christian life depend upon the fidelity of self-examination and the honesty of purpose with which one renews his vow of renunciation! We cannot, in such cases, "let them off," as the children say, with the surrender of this or that equivocal pleasure. We must persuade them to resolve that while they use freely and thankfully the good gifts of God, they will strive to recollect themselves, and ask, in every doubtful instance, what would my Lord have me to do. 5. And, lastly, having affirmed and impressed these great principles, we should not shrink from giving our advice and our opinion concerning this or that indulgence or temptation. Each one has his own opinions;...
